

STARAR (STARRAR), ANDREW

STARARR($TARRAR), JACOB

The old pioneer Jacob Starr (sic), who has spent many years of his life in prospecting and mining in Arizona, made some pointed remarks , showing conclusively that it would be much nearer for the citizens of Phoenix to come through Tempe thence on to the new mines, and that even should Phoenix not co-operate with the people here at present but build a separate road, that in less than one year the travel would be diverted from the Phoenix road to the one offering superior advantages, and a direct air line from Tempe, saving a number of miles thereby.

...

Weekly Phoenix Herald,

6/ 19/ 84, 3:4

A MEXICAN MURDERED.

Celso Grijalva Shoots and Instantly
Kills Pedro Ortega.

At about 11 o'clock this morning a Mexican runner came in from Mr. Jacob Starar's ranch, some two miles southeast of town, to announce to the authorities the murder of Pedro Ortega. ...

Grijalva's family are in Sonora, and he was cultivating a small crop on Mr. Starar's ranch. He escaped after the murder.

...

Weekly Phoenix Herald,

12/ 6/ 88, 3:2

At 5:30 yesterday afternoon, James Tewksbury, who was at the time visiting Jake Starrar and had suddenly taken sick, succumbed to that dread disease--quick consumption. He contracted the malady in Ponto Basin during the Tonto war. Up to that time he had been a healthy and vigorous man, but exposure entailed by lying out without shelter in rain and snow brought on his lung troubles. ...